Anderson, Freeman in Race for Governor

The contest for governor promises to be one of the tightest, and certainly one of the most interesting, in next Tuesday's election.

What some observers have called a "Democratic trend" has brightened the hopes of John A. Anderson of Chicago, the Democratic governor candidate, and Gov. C. Elmer Anderson, that he has a race on his hands.

A third candidate, Ross Schlach- ter of the Labor party, is a long shot in the county farmer, filed by nominating petition and is not expected to come near the ballot in the local gubernatorial election. The change of party name was necessitated by a Minnesota law which forbids two parties to put part of the same name on the ballot (the word "Labor" is set aside for the exclusive use of the Democratic-Labor party).

Republican

C. ELMER ANDERSON, 42, Secretary of Agriculture, is running for re-election.

Anderson's statements have been anything but favorable for attracting the people of Minnesota to his party program, as well as his governor is the desire to continue those programs and projects which have been launched on the state's behalf and to modernize administration and those of his predecessors.

"These programs of good for the public are all making progress, and I am certain that with a change in administration and personnel, much may be accomplished in that progress. With experience and knowledge of the state's needs, the personnel of my administration is especially equipped to carry the various programs toward their objective."

"After three years as governor, I am convinced that experience in a lesser position of government and in the work of better trained in the art of handling the work of government and the possibilities of adapting the experiences of the government of similar businesses is of major importance. I certainly believe that the people of Minnesota need the services of a person with a record of service in the last years of experience in public office, and the qualifications which are best for setting the example."

Olvie E. Freeman, 36, St. Paul attorney, married, two children, Phi Beta Kappa, University of Minnesota law school, Phi Delta Fraternity. Freeman is a member of the American Bar Association, Minnesota Bar Association, Minnesota Historical Society.

Peterson is a member of the American Bar Association, Minnesota Bar Association, and the Minnesota Historical Society.

Two former Minnesota chairmen of their respective political parties are competing for the position of lieutenant governor.

They are Karl F. Rolvaag, Republican, and Bennet Johnson, Democrat.

One of them will become the next governor of the state, and the other will be the lieutenant governor. The lieutenant governor appointment will be made by the governor-elect.

The lieutenant governor must have an intimate knowledge of the workings of our legislative affairs because he is the presiding officer of the state senate. His eight years of service as a member of the legislature has given him that experience. As chairman of the civil administrative committee for the past four years he has gained an insight into the basic problems that confront Minnesota.

Knowledge of parliamentary procedure is prerequisite to the administration of the state's legislative affairs. I have had the experience of presiding over the House on numerous occasions.

The public also should know the kind of leadership which will be given by the governor would be identified. I have introduced and sponsored most innovative legislation in the state's benefit. Minnesota labor, historic, educational, cooperative, and legislative programs. The people have the right to know the kind of leadership which will be given by the governor.

The Democratic-Farmer Labor party is strongly opposed to a general retail sales tax. The Republican party and its leadership has not opposed a sales tax. Most of its leaders have announced in favor of a sales tax.

"The state government is unprecedented. The years between the sessions of the legislature, the years that we do not intend to do anything substantial. These sessions have been used to enact legislation that has been beneficial to the public welfare."

"I believe that the people of Minnesota are entitled to have the legislature in session again, and the taxpayers should be able to determine whether a sales tax is necessary or not."

Rolvaag vs. Peterson for Lt. Governor

Lieutenant Governor's Job

The lieutenant governor presides over the Minnesota state senate but does not have a vote unless the governor is absent or absent a vote. He has an important administrative office that is a member of the Council of State Government. He has been the president of the Council of State Government for the past three years.

The lieutenant governor has the responsibility of being an effective spokesman for the people of Minnesota and for promoting the best interests of the state. He is the representative of the governor in the state senate and in all matters relating to the state government.

The lieutenant governor's duties include: serving as a member of the Council of State Government, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Directors, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Trustees, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Governors, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Directors, and serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Trustees.

Peterson's statement: "I believe that the lieutenant governor's duties include serving as a member of the Council of State Government, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Directors, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Trustees, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Governors, serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Directors, and serving as a member of the Minnesota Historical Society Board of Trustees."

"I might just say that during the 11 years I have held office we have accomplished at no added expense to the taxpayers a results-oriented operation to a system using the most modern automatic equipment available at this time. Not only has this modernization program saved the taxpayers a good many thousands of dollars annually but it has increased, to a degree almost beyond belief, the accuracy and efficiency of our office."

MINNEAPOLIS LEGISLATIVE DISTRICTS

"My district comprises of people from many walks of life and also has in it the state's largest educational institution. In order to do justice to all, a representative from this district should serve with the majority group in order to effect changes that will be beneficial to the metropolitan area as a whole. The voice of the people of Minnesota should always be represented by a member of the House of Representatives. In the five terms I have served in the legislature, I have been successful in preparing legislation creating and adding our youth conservation commission; mental health laws; laws governing the use of natural resources; help to the aged; laws which assist the working man and his family; and as a member of the educational committee, I am helping to shape the future of a sound educational program.
